REV. JOHN'S MUSINGS

For June's article of Musings, I want to talk about change but from a theological viewpoint. Due to the recent COVID, and now as you will seek an interim pastor, St. Luke's is experiencing change.

Change is inevitable. Biblically and theologically speaking, change is essential and part of God's creation. Creation involved change – from nothing, from the formless void, to a beautiful creation. Unlike many world views in which time is cyclical, inescapable, or meaningless, Biblical time is purposeful, forward moving, and climaxing in the fulfillment of God's promises and plan.

However not all things change. First, God does not change. God is relationally dynamic; that is to say, God is personal and lovingly and graciously interacts with all of creation. God does not change in nature, character, or attributes.

Human condition has not changed. From the fall of Adam and Eve, all humans who have every lived (save for Jesus) have been sinners by nature and by choice. No matter how good or how bad any individual person's actions may be, all have fallen short of what God expects and demands.

Change, even chaotic change, can be good. Studies in chaos and complexity theory have shown that equilibrium leads to stagnation which leads to death. Change, and even moving to the edge of chaos, is what causes living systems to adapt, find new solutions, and improve. The disturbances caused by change and chaos can be, in fact, life savers. Remember how God brought radical change to Israel, often through her worst enemies.

The key, therefore, is how we evaluate change. Should we embrace it or resist it?

What is actually changing? As America changes rapidly, the church must clearly identify the changes worth confronting. How often are we expending energy simply resisting change that affects our sentimentality about life and culture and our preferences about the church?

How can and will God use change for His glory? As hard as it is, we need to work to see the biggest picture possible – God's. What is He doing through these changes? What does He want to do in my individual life, in my church, and through believers in America and around the world? How are these changes moving us toward the fulfillment of His promises?

Change is rarely comfortable. I am convinced that more often than not God is waiting for us to seize the moment, "making the most of the time" (Col. 4:5b), internally and externally to our society.

Pastor John

KEEPING IN TOUCH!!

One of the good things that has come from COVID-19 is our live streaming. Several folks have expressed interest in continuing this vital service. We will have to figure out music for licensing over the internet so we do not get ourselves into a legal situation. Also we would have to use two different computers - one for the live stream and another one for the power point projection. This will be an ongoing progress to find a solution.

Also for those who do not have internet capabilities and cannot be in touch with this service, we have come up with a solution where you can call in on a free conference call and listen to the worship service.

This is how it works: Participant instructions - (that's you)

You dial this number - (701) 802-5032 and you will be prompted by a message to enter the St. Luke's Access Code which you enter in the numbers of the access code 7820699.

Thanks! Keeping you connected! Pastor John

Memorial Day message from the Conference Minister:

“Monuments come and monuments go but monumental lives linger long into the future.” I don't know when I first heard that expression but stuck long ago among the mental treasures that clutter my cerebral attic. There is no monument of stone or marble that can replace the monuments we build in our hearts to the memory of loved ones. Memorial Day weekend is for both kinds of monuments — ones hewn from hearts the other from marble.

Historically, Christian worship is not a place to celebrate monumental patriotism. It is a place to celebrate Jesus Christ and his call to live in ways not of this world — to turn the other cheek, to love enemies; to serve one Master and one another; to go into the world baptizing in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit — in other words to live monumental lives.

That said, I'm thankful to be an American citizen. While the pandemic has shown a bright light on the things that divide us and the liabilities of inept and corrupt leadership that have been with us since our nation's founding, I still believe deeply in the unique and enduring principles of our Constitutional Democracy and the core values that undergird them. I've been in places where the only and most beautiful colors were red, white, and blue and I value the monumental sacrifices that have been made for our country. To them, I have added a few small sacrifices of my own.

My Christian obligations include being a good citizen and honoring the memory of other good citizens who've encouraged our present, inspired our future and whose sacrifices in our day amid the pandemic safeguard public health and wellness. And so, this weekend we remember the honored dead of wars past. They should not be driven out of time and we will not do that. We gather at many monuments, including those built in our hearts and minds, to honor their monumental sacrifices.

Most importantly, we remember the saints who died to the glory of God. They should not be driven out of our time lest we be driven from the grace of God and we will not do that. We Christians gather every Sabbath at one cross to offer honor and praise to the one sacrifice that has made monuments of us all—members of the living breathing body of Christ.

I pray for your safety and wellbeing and that the sacrifices we all make now will plant the seeds of a joyous and health filled reunion — soon. Grace and Peace, Rev. Bill Worley Conference Minister
